Preface

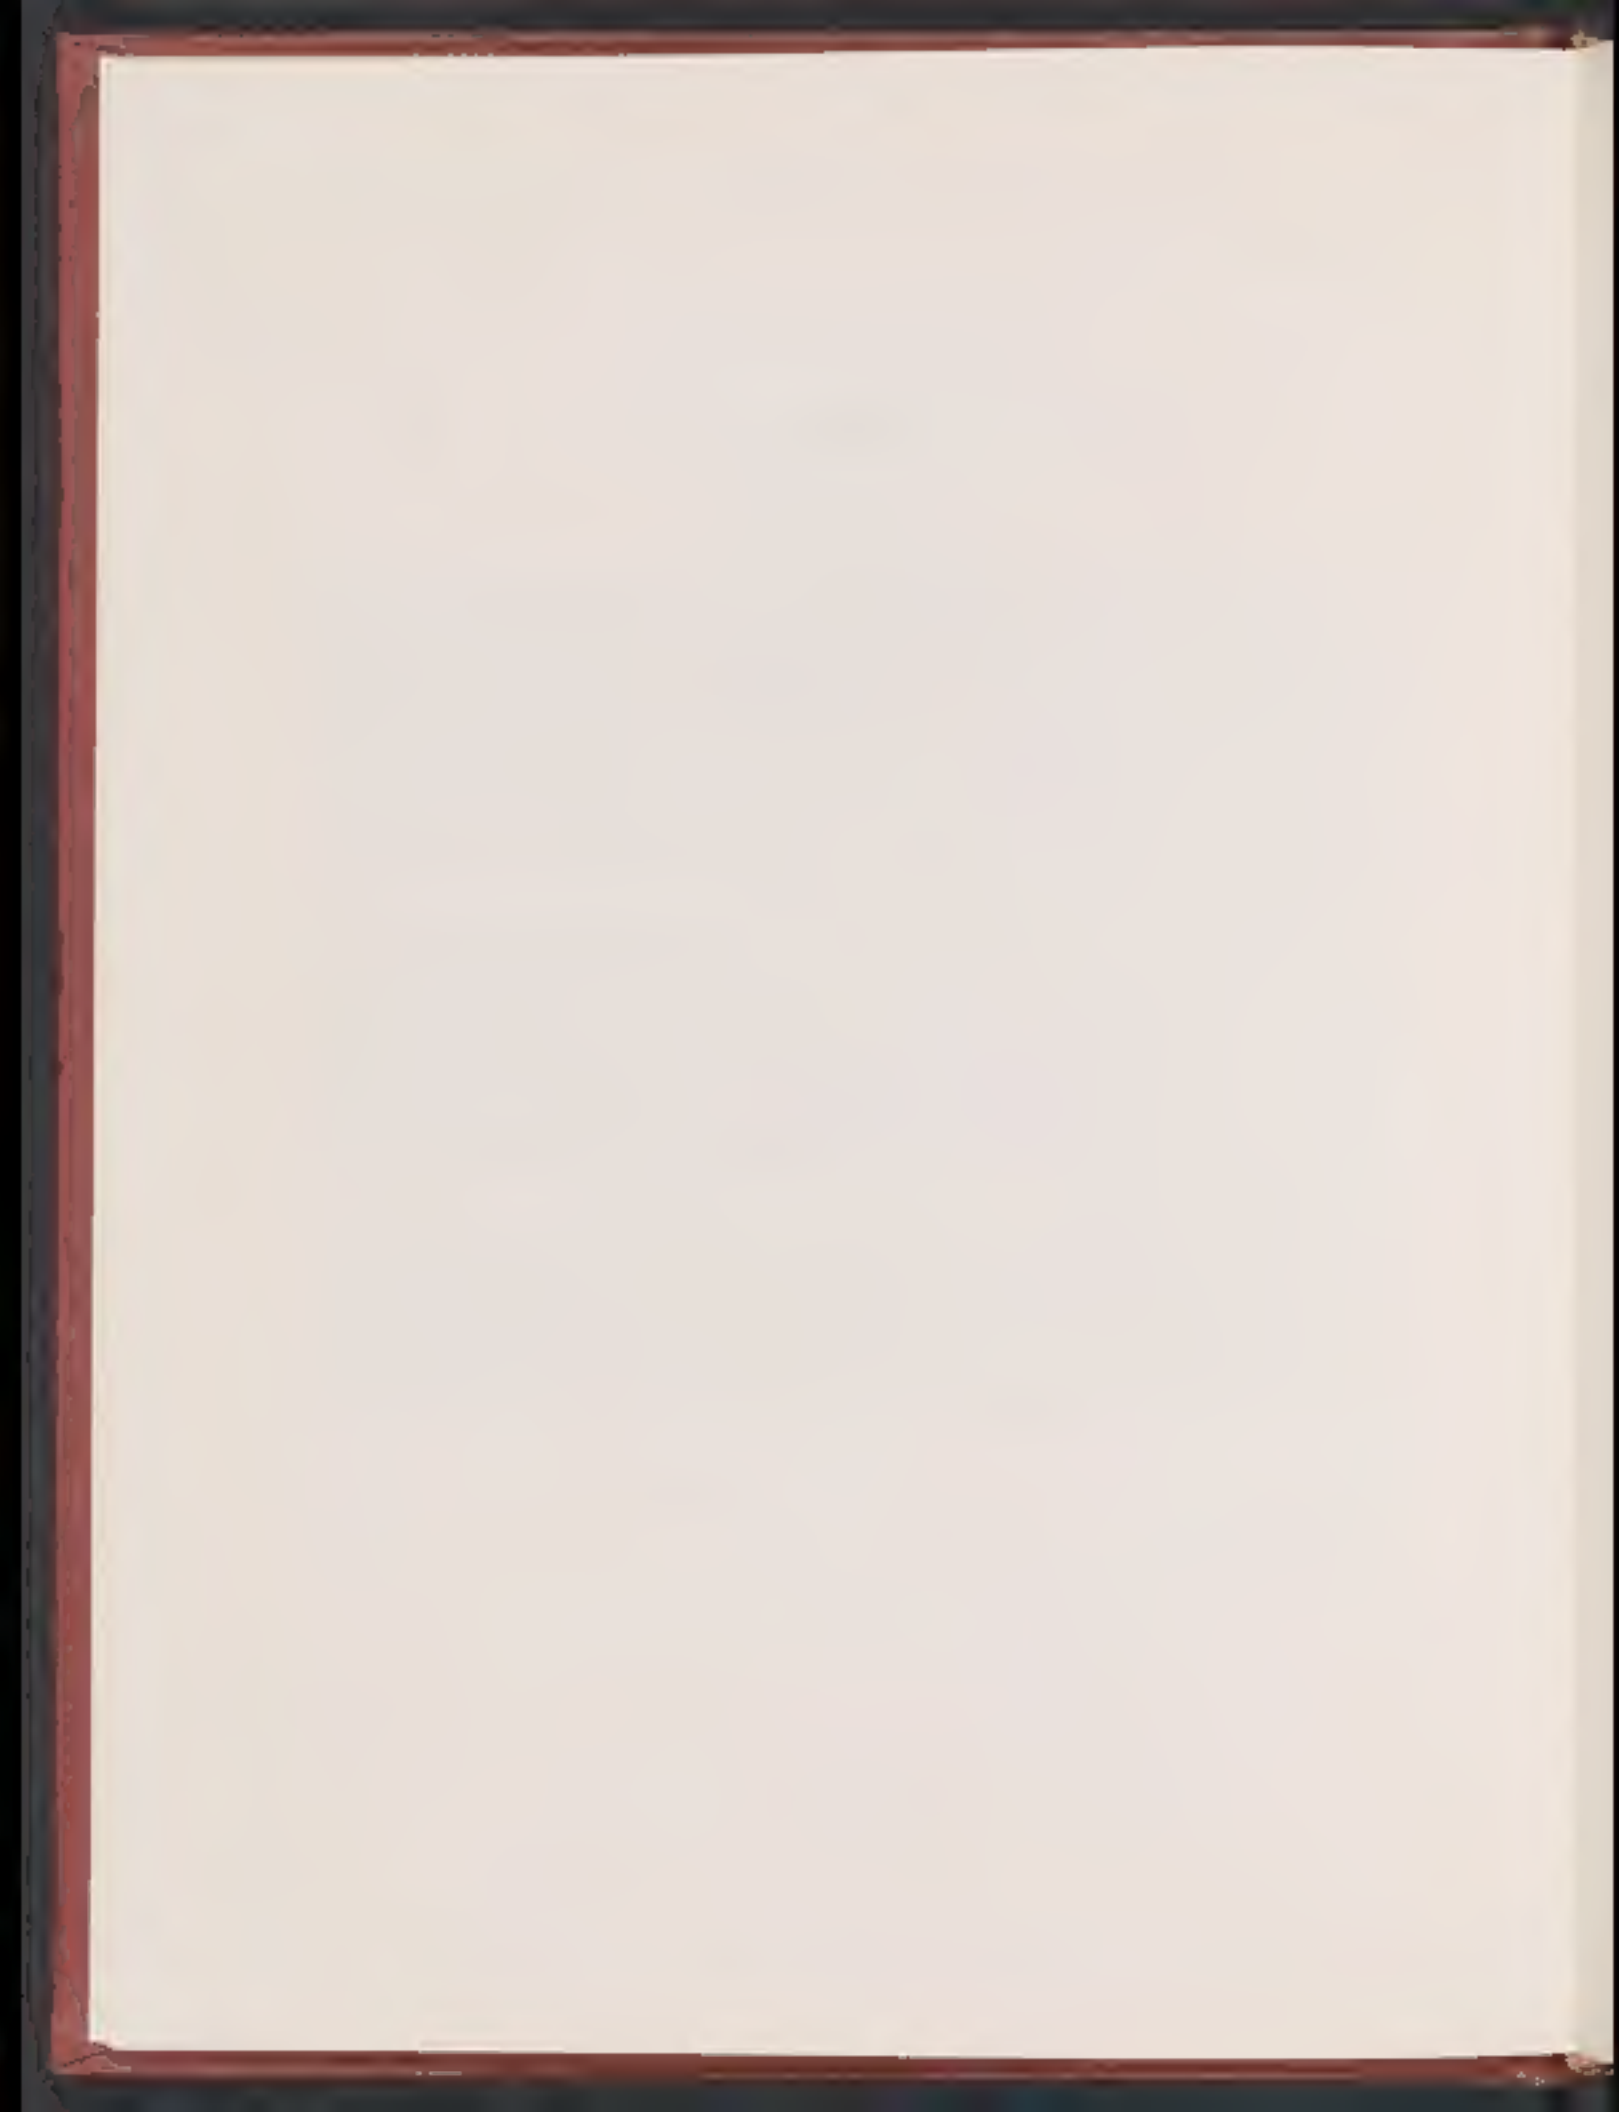

I have but few points to clarify or emphasize in advance, for if this study does not succeed in posturing itself in the eyes of the reader, it is pointless that I undertake to do so here myself. My aim has not been to add another work to the roster of books and articles on the imperial estates throughout the empire. My purpose has been much more modest and limited: I deal only with Egypt, and only with the period during which the emperors were in fact personal owners of private property in that province. This is not the first time that such a study has been undertaken, nor will it be the last. In some areas I repeat or reinforce the opinions of my predecessors; in many others I offer a different approach and, hopefully, a more plausible interpretation. Throughout this work I have tried to guide myself by two strong beliefs: that certainties are luxuries a papyrologist ought to learn to live without; and that it is always more advantageous to the progress of knowledge to confess ignorance than to construct false edifices.

A slightly different version of this study was presented as a dissertation to the Faculty of the Graduate School of Yale University in November 1972. To Professor Ramsay MacMullen, who supervised the writing of it, I am grateful for helping me glimpse something of Roman history, a history which as a Hellénist and a philologist I had always neglected, for trying to make my English readable, and for forcing me, time and again, to elucidate various points and to avoid lack of precision or of documentation. To Professor Naphthali Lewis, who suggested that I undertake this study, I am grateful for showing me my first papyrus and teaching me how to read it; for revealing to me a new and strange wonderland; and for offering me a large number of improved readings and of various suggestions, all of which I gratefully incorporated in my text. To both I tender my warmest thanks.

My thanks are also due to many other scholars whose assistance has proven invaluable. Some supplied me with offprints or copies of their work; others with photographs or transcripts of published as well as unpublished papyri; all took time to offer me help and advice. I am particularly grateful to Dr. R. A. Coles, Prof. J. F. Gilliam, Prof. H. G. Gandel, Mrs. S. Rambisis, Prof. J. G. Keenan, Dr. H.-C. Kuhnke, Miss G. Matheson, Prof. W. Müller, Dr. G. For paper making, pulping of the straw is followed by a series of steps: papermaking, bleaching, and finishing. The first two steps are the most important. The first step is pulping, which is the process of breaking down the straw into fibers. This is done by cooking the straw in a solution of sodium hydroxide (NaOH) and sodium sulfide (Na₂S). The second step is bleaching, which is the process of removing the lignin from the fibers. This is done by treating the fibers with a solution of sodium hypochlorite (NaOCl). The third step is finishing, which is the process of adding various chemicals to the fibers to improve their properties. This is done by treating the fibers with a solution of various chemicals, such as calcium chloride (CaCl₂) and sodium sulfate (Na₂SO₄).

A number of authors have shown that the use of a single, standard, reference for the analysis of a mixture is not sufficient. For this reason, a number of authors have proposed the use of a reference mixture. This mixture is used to determine the relative retention times of the components of the mixture. The relative retention times are then used to identify the components of the mixture. The use of a reference mixture is a common practice in the analysis of mixtures.

IMPERIAL PRINCIPLES IN ROMAN LITERATURE

Let \mathcal{L}_m be the set of m -permutation arguments of \mathbf{L} . Then $\mathcal{L}_m = \{ \langle \lambda, \mu \rangle \in \Lambda \times \Lambda : \lambda \vdash \mu \text{ and } |\lambda| = m \}$. Let $\mathcal{L}_m^{\text{inv}}$ be the set of m -permutation arguments of \mathbf{L} that are inversions. Then $\mathcal{L}_m^{\text{inv}} = \{ \langle \lambda, \mu \rangle \in \mathcal{L}_m : \lambda \vdash \mu \text{ and } \lambda \neq \mu \}$. Let $\mathcal{L}_m^{\text{inv}, \text{inv}}$ be the set of m -permutation arguments of \mathbf{L} that are inversions of inversions. Then $\mathcal{L}_m^{\text{inv}, \text{inv}} = \{ \langle \lambda, \mu \rangle \in \mathcal{L}_m^{\text{inv}} : \lambda \vdash \mu \text{ and } \lambda \neq \mu \}$.

concept in a country which had been for millennia totally unaware of it, caused a marked disorder effect in all parts of Egypt. This is most notable in the Asyut district, where our information is more complete, and where there was a greater concentration of private ownership than in any other part of Egypt. Soon, perhaps already by the end of August 1909, when the law took effect, the exceptions that an individual's private holdings in land formed a single geographical unity had a scattering in various parts of the village, and others in many villages. The right now introduced for the first time as a consequence of the introduction of private ownership, to divide up one's land among different heirs, was going with it to introduce not a little trouble. Other equally important factors were the constant buying and selling of portions of landed properties, contribution for non-payment of taxes, reselling of such lands by the state, and the purchases of whole or pieces of land were offered by the department of the villages. This lack of topographical unity is more evident in larger holdings and even more so in smaller estates which, due to the constancy of nomenclature, can be traced back longer periods of time, and which, once they become part of the patrimonial principle, tended to loss for a long time. Several topographic units were combined. But it is erroneous to assert that scattered parcels are characteristic of only one type of estate. The so-called marfūf is the norm in Egypt, whether the land is an imperial estate of immense size or the humble property of a family consisting of a few persons.

Half a century hence, most of the fertile topsoil of the Nile prior to the fall of Egypt, the soil was that which the weary peasant of Egypt had sown. The peasant in position and person, a product of the dynasty, was left to it. No peasant had left in a hundred years upon the earth he had sown. What was the subsequent effect of the Egyptian aristocracy and peasantry of Egypt? There can be no doubt that in the long run they were successful. The very part of the fall of Egyptian regime saw the introduction of a new life to Egypt, the country, and the return to productivity of large areas of neglected land. In the Arimate, for example, which was and still is the peak and problem of Egypt, the irrigation system is now a part of the state of neglect, and the desert has reclaimed much of the land that once energy and knowledge of Egypt's peasantry had made flourish. As peasants employed by gangs in the task of clearing and developing the land there and elsewhere in Egypt, but there remained the more important of it, clearing the land.

This kind way of treating peasants did not, as such, was characteristic of despotism land, although the distinction between a peasant and a noble was not important for taxation and justice. It never was the practice, either of the Ptolemies or of the Romans, to bring such land back to and the \mathcal{H}_2 norm of the system is given by $\|G\|_2 = \sqrt{\lambda_{\max}(P)}$, where P is the unique positive definite solution of the Lyapunov equation $AP + PA^T + C^T C = 0$. The \mathcal{H}_2 norm of the system is a measure of the energy of the system. The \mathcal{H}_2 norm of the system is a measure of the energy of the system.

Abstract. We consider the problem of finding the maximum likelihood estimator of the parameters of a linear regression model where the error term follows a generalized linear distribution. The maximum likelihood estimator is obtained by solving a set of nonlinear equations. The asymptotic properties of the maximum likelihood estimator are studied. It is shown that the maximum likelihood estimator is unbiased and efficient under certain conditions. The asymptotic normality of the maximum likelihood estimator is also established. Finally, some numerical results are presented to illustrate the performance of the maximum likelihood estimator.

ἀδελφὸν, they continued to be called οἰκίαι and to carry the name of their original Roman owner.¹⁶

But while this new ratio was made out of οἰκίαι, not all οἰκίαι in Egypt belonged to or were administered by it. This is an extremely important point to bear in mind. For just as the Latin-speaking part of the world continued to employ the term patrimonium when referring to all kinds of property and did not apply it exclusively to imperial property, so Egypt, both before and after the creation of the οἰκονομία, used the terms οἰκονομία, οἶκος, and οἰκία and continued to mean "property" and "estate," not "imperial property" or "privileged estate." It could be, for example, and was applied to privately owned estates totally unconnected with the imperial patrimonium. Or it could be, and was, applied to properties which, for a variety of reasons, had been confiscated by the state (and not by the emperor) through the agency of the department of the οἰκονομολογία. As such, these properties were exactly like so many other ἐκταγμένα, ἐκδοθέντα or ἐκτεταγμένα οἰκονομολογία to ἀδελφοὶ or being a τμήμα ἐκδοθέντος to οἰκονομολογία, and sometimes were incorporated into the so-called "royal" and the οἰκονομία. They plainly belonged not to the οἰκονομία κατὰ τὴν οἰκονομία which in fact administered them. When the term οἰκονομία for οἰκονομία replaced οἰκονομία and became the predominant way of designating the fiscus, confiscated properties were occasionally called οἰκονομία or οἶκος again, they were not the private property of the emperor but παρὰ τὴν οἰκονομία, i.e. part of the οἰκονομία.

Consequently, there are only two ways by which one can determine whether a property, be it known as οἰκονομία or by any other name, is or is not part of οἰκονομία: it must carry the name of an emperor or of a member of an imperial family, or it must be shown to be part of the οἰκονομία κατὰ τὴν οἰκονομία. And considering the fact that all the available evidence strongly suggests that after the formation of this ratio by the Flavians no more additions were made to it, it is highly likely that all the estates that make up the οἰκονομία κατὰ τὴν οἰκονομία in Egypt are ἀδελφὰ οἰκονομολογία.

As in most other parts of the empire, there is a marked tendency in Egypt for the imperial estates to retain the name of their former owner. There are two standard ways in which such a name was attached to a landed property.

Employment of the possessive genitive. This is of course the standard manner to designate the current owner of an estate, e.g. ἡ ἐκδοθέν Καὶ Σαῦς Κλαύδιος, Σεπτιμίου Εὐφροσίου Ἀντοκλείου οἰκονομία (P. Mich. 21 recto II v. P. Mich. 214 P. Oxy. 2837), ἡ ἐκδοθέν Κλαύδιος Ἀντοκλείου, Σεπτιμίου οἰκονομία (P. Ryfl. 145v, 146v), ἡ ἐκδοθέν Σεπτιμίου οἰκονομία ἐκ ἐκδοθέντος Κλαύδιος (P. Lond. 445 II p. 166) οἰκονομία ἐκ ἐκδοθέντος Σεπτιμίου οἰκονομία ἐκ ἐκδοθέντος Κλαύδιος (SB 10546), ἡ ἐκδοθέν Ἀντοκλείου Σεπτιμίου οἰκονομία (P. Oxy. 2873), ἡ ἐκδοθέν Ἡερωνίου οἰκονομία ἐκ ἐκδοθέντος Περσίου (P. Ryfl. 177). That it is not employed to designate the former owner, in which case the term ἐκδοθέν is often abbreviated as ἐκ or ἐκ is usually, but not invariably, added, e.g., ἀδελφὴ Ἀντοκλείου οἰκονομία ἐκ ἐκδοθέντος Περσίου Κλαύδιος (P. Fay. 490), ἐκδοθέν Σεπτιμίου (P. Ryfl.

¹⁶ It has been suggested that the οἰκονομία was a patrimonium of the emperor, i.e. an estate granted to him by the state. This is not only impossible, but also unjustified, since οἰκονομία was used to designate the property of other persons besides the emperor.

Smith*, Imperial Administration in the Empire of Augustus, Cambridge, Mass., 1938, p. 111) see Placensium, *W. G. References to Erasmus later in the letter to the pope indicate that since his return from Scotland, Erasmus had fasted to the point of being ill, and since it was not unusual for him to fast, it is certain that the expression "and he is very sick" was not exaggerated. What has helped to the credence of this claim is most recently pointed out by a number of scholars, namely that the very expression is identical with the expression in the Admonitio.

In addition to the numerous letters in the Autograph Manuscript 51, Audubon's Polias and Cathartidae correspondence included Audubon's letters to his sons, I, George, and John, and their exchange of transatlantic letters. The earliest reference to a transatlantic letter dates from 1825, and a document already referred to here which he appears to have written with his father in October 1821.

Figure 1. The effect of the initial concentration of the monomer on the polymerization of N-vinylcarbazole initiated by SnCl_4 in CH_2Cl_2 at -78°C . The polymerization was carried out in a 100 ml. three-necked round-bottomed flask equipped with a magnetic stirrer, a thermometer, and a nitrogen inlet. The monomer was added to the flask, followed by the initiator. The flask was cooled to -78°C and the polymerization was allowed to proceed for 24 h. The polymer was isolated by precipitation into methanol and dried under vacuum at 40°C for 24 h. The exact time at which Seif started his request is not known. In 1911 or 12 he was dealing with his uncle, Hassan Pasha, then ruler of Alexandria, but whether he began purchasing land in that month, or anywhere else, is not known. The Egyptian government did not index anything between 1911 and 1914, but there was a change in policy in 1915, and anything that from 1915 to 1917 had to be traced through a long and expensive process. Hassan Pasha died in 1915, and a severe blow to Seif's hopes came from that. He was a member of a family who was friendly with the Egyptian government, and he was a member of the Egyptian army. He had requested from the government a large tract of land in the desert, and he had been told that the government was willing to do so. evidence that any additions were made to it, as there is no evidence that later emperors or relatives of theirs subsequently owned and used it, except when they, counting the throne would become part of the patrimonial property. Up to Augustus, the patrimonial and was growing in size from their own wealth, rather than from the state treasury.

Now, a popular Hellenistic way of regarding ancient Egyptians (even) – the way not only designated as the ‘true’ Egyptian but which envisaged the postcolonial Egyptian partnership in the pharaonicist, i.e. Hellenistic, civilisation (4) – was much more negative, perhaps, without fully realising it was giving pharaonicism a postcolonial and colonialist pedestal. In short, Vespasian, with certain ‘7’s and ‘8’s, really helped to give a new shape to a new ‘Egyptian’ (‘7 and ‘8 – I suggest) that they were concerned with, i.e. of the pharaonicism genre as well – certainly of the Egyptian part, perhaps of an ‘Achaemenid’-like one, except that the entire pharaonicism was of even a higher, not the division between a civilisation and a religion, but a civilisation and the beginning of the ‘Bible’ culture – I am certainly worried purely administrative, perhaps, but do very much point to the ‘theology’ of the ‘organization’ of the ‘civilisation’ (‘7 and ‘8) as an organization that in a pharaonicist postcolonial and colonialist way, i.e. in a postcolonialist way, ‘re-organized’ Egypt. As to the civilisation during Vespasian’s reign, when such a ‘development’ of the Egyptian pharaonicism principle was made, I am not interested. It seems very likely, however, to have taken place early in ‘70, when both Vespasian and him were in Alexandria, and when a reorganization of the province (and especially of its system of taxation) was carried out.

With the exception of Mesadima, Chander Viki, Khwastan and Lamas, we found the other original remains of irrigation systems—qanats—in more than 30 villages in the Arghande. On the northern shore of Lake Merv, along the long irrigation canal, traces of which survive, and the northern desert road, there is a long string of small towns and villages whose land attracted members and friends of the upper house, as well as of the lower, and the metropolitans from Arak, and other cities. To the north, Dams, Barmak, Parsant, Bokkhar, Barmarpanas, Kerkessukha, Karmir, Ghara Nava, Dams, Harkiz, Kevan, Phedmas, Yea, Perkeser, and further to the west the isolated Neker-span, Nava. Another line of towns and villages runs along the southern shore of the lake, those on the southwestern section of the line situated on the desert, and to the small oases, Damsava, Barmak, Bulhatiga, Harkiz, Aggaton, Thendelphi, Barmak, and further to the south, Harkiz, Agros and then Barmar. A third group is scattered north, west and south of the lake, and the south-eastern tip of the nome near Herakleopolis, now plain desert but once fertile land now crossed by canals. Anubias, Katsipae, Theboms, Laga, Narmouth, Ghir, Fokop, Phartaton, Toler and Ichkum.

For a precious few (Hiera Nesou, Drumas Hieras Nesou, Perkeesis, Ptolemais Nes, perhaps Laga as well) we have all-inclusive lists preserved in a single document. In the majority of the cases, however, the information for any given location is available in numerous unrelated papyri, a jigsaw puzzle whose pieces are not all known, and whose assemblage is incomplete and conjectural at best. Moreover the notes that came to be drawn up by former owners of country, organized by village, although by no means exhaustive, is nonetheless impressive.

Another papyrus, the beginning of which is missing, deals most likely with Theadelphia too, although, since it was discovered in Philadelphia, it is quite possible that the latter village is meant.¹⁷ Of the list of former owners of imperial estates only the names of Dionysodoros and Kharabes survive. The entire amount produced of the domesticae in private rentals in grain is known – 215,000,000 arourai, expected to contribute 170000,48 arourai of wheat and 8900,12 arourai of barley p. 130.¹⁸ This tally, with the sums attested in the previous document, and if the village in this one is Philadelphia, then it must have had about the same number and arrangement of localities as well), we should not ignore the fact that the public granaries of Theadelphia were regional ones, i.e. they received grain not only from the fields of the village itself, but also from those of neighbouring communities, such as Euterpeia and Polidionia. When compared with Table 8, Tables 10, 11 and 12 are shown to have provided us with very misleading information.

There are then the documents that offer us an extensive and fairly comprehensive list of imperial estates in the Arsinoite. The total area of these estates that we can accept for is about 9800 arourae. If we add to this paper a miscellaneous collection of private documents (sales, leases, loans, memoranda, payments, etc.) and also a number of public ones (petitions for redress, declarations of plots of unutilised land, etc.) we are able to reach official lists and accounts that mention still additional plots of state land, totalling together more than one to about 50 arourae. The grand total of the known state land in the Arsinoite is hence to be considered as of order to be less than 10 000 arourae. In a normal year this would be expected to yield between 40 000 and 60 000 arourae of wheat or cereals – a very valuable item indeed. A question that must remain unanswered at least for the present is what part of this state total of the remaining 9000 arourae are these 10 000 arourae we have considered for? Considering that more than half of the known state area is made up by unutilised lands, and bearing in mind that a single and otherwise unimportant small settlement plan (the lake-shore like Phakagium accounts for more than one fifth of the presently known total) it would be wise not to venture any speculation. The evidence is simply not enough.

Of the three areas of cultivated land in Egypt, the Delta, the Nile valley and the Arsinoite, the last was also the smallest, comprising about one tenth of the total. In 1880 it was estimated that the Fayum, the present name of the Arsinoite district, had about 1700 km² or slightly less than 5000 arourae, i.e. about 10% of the total Egyptian area. Some Pharaonic and Roman times (like Meroë) may have covered about twice the amount of land than Egypt today. Temporarily cultivated plots now ploughed or were under cultivation. The little settlements of small villages and towns and small estates. Obviously point out two large areas of this land, the district from Sakmianopolis to Philadelphia and further to the east, and the portion of the dyke of Thermopolis and Polidion between Theadelphia and Magdola. The size of the delta of the Arsinoite under cultivation by the Ptolemies and the Romans must have been larger than the Delta, and its size was most likely between 1800 and 2000 km² or approximately twice as large as the present Fayum.

Clearly, the east majority of the state land was sown with cereals. Under the Romans, however, the Arsinoite continued to be a very important source of cotton, of culture of papyrus, olives and palm trees, also papyrus, figs, grapes and pomegranates, and many other crops, not a little for the economic life of the area. From the south of the delta and the papyrus fields, the land raised a variety of trees for prospect here and there, which were fished. It is well to be reminded that a popular fishery guide book speaks of the district as the best for catching fish.

Vineyards and garden lands were the most prominent features of the cultivation of private land in the north. We know, for example, of a private estate in a Thermopolis quarter in which had, among other types of area, the large amount of about 500 arourae of vineyards. It is counts for 5 B.C. shows a heavy deficit, possibly because of mismanagement, but possibly also because the Protestant churches, many of them, and Antiochian churches have formed in Berkeley Springs, N. Va., but there is no priest there now. We have, on the other hand, many hundreds of references to sheep and goats belonging to various states, and tended by individuals. That these animals existed on isolated farms, or in the mountains, and were usually looked after by shepherds had little to do with the practice of tending the state by a priest, or a priestly hierarchy, to take them. Apparently the word 'shepherd' was, in the pastures of the state to which the animals belonged, different from a title, and a responsibility, but it was, in fact, an individual living in Berkeley Springs, N. Va., paid $150 per annum, for the tending of a certain number of the pastures of the Antiochian state, and $200 elsewhere for the tending of an unknown number of sheep of the Communism estate.

The tenants who were farmers, as opposed to the marshes and the pastures dealt directly with the landlords and the acquisition of land when they ceased or withdrew their land. Very few leases remain from the 14th century period, and there is no evidence that they differed in any way from other leases to land privately owned and held. Some farmers felt the desire of the nobles to sublease part or all of their plot to other tenants, but there was nothing to prevent them either, nor does it appear as if the wealthy regularly let large plots of land. The particular interest in application for the leasing of land of the estate of John Ayscough and the children of Germanham, especially since it has been taken by some as an indication of the existence of a monopoly in the production of paper.¹ But all the existing states is that the settlement of the Colymbion was the complete monopoly of paper for paper and to be taken from the marsh in the state extending from the foundation of Henry to those of Henry. It is true that the crown and to sell them in any volume of the entire business during the twelfth century of Henry I, 1134 to 1155, he still paid a substantial sum of 15000 pounds supplemental and receipts for the three installments. The crown had a monopoly, certainly as far as she had absolute control over the products of her own estate.

In the treatment of his tenants the pasha was in a far more advantageous position than any other owner of land in Egypt. The power at his disposal enabled him to ask, to persuade, or threaten, or to compel, as he saw fit, and he was never brought into contact with the law.

Part of this I would consider undifferentiated propaganda and rhetoric, e.g. the section "no little harm has been done by the compulsion of many persons inexperienced in such duties," and "I know that it is to the advantage of the imperial service to have men administer these leave willingly and zealously." To be sure, harm was being done, but that was not the point, more harm was being done unless the administration was centralized, when no persons appeared willingly or unwillingly. The prefect is simply practicing the loyalty with the ruler, the devotion and this is perhaps why he unhesitatingly omitted the formal excuses the traditional tax farmers a service that required capital in order to be performed. What is more important is that the prefect acknowledges practices like forced loans do actually take place conform to the general practice of the prefects and as the result of emergency + temporary + exceptional. He may or he may not have meant only his immediate predecessor, 44, and his focus is, but since he himself had taken office four whole years before the publication of this edict, it is difficult to see who people were complaining if he had not offered such leave. It could then possibly be the recently murdered emperor? There is little doubt, however, that he wishes to portray such practices as illegal, illegal and sporadic, certainly not as traditional or systematic.

The little evidence that we have regarding this seems to be, of course, although we have to turn their nose to the Atlantic before introducing [polymorph]. There is no way of engineering around the object of this claim: this selected arbitrariness is still an engineering, and therefore it should be considered as a form of manipulation (65). He is not on the matter of the arbitrariness of the selected polities. As part of the "community service" and although the expression community service is a somewhat popularized others that express the same report are known to me in the early 1980s, as a result of a long engineering process for nomination for effect applications for the "service". This is not a new rule, indisputably designed by systems that to some, or to others, or to all, the arbitrariness of the imposed norm was a compulsory service. This is a personal example to him. Although the subject is related, for me, it is not valid for further studies, as the "community service" is not a new word and the validity of examples such as community service is not a new word and the validity of the term, however, that in the particular instance, we have a new word, but another research.

One should observe that not all tenants of imperial estates during the reign of the Julio-Claudians were indultarii. One should also note that the indultarii are essentially non-imperial estates (Maecenas, Petronius, Claudius) appearing only after these men had become imperial property. Is this simply due to accident, or are these of course a privileged group found exclusively in estates owned by the emperor or members of his family (Della Anguilla, Utriusque)? Also, it is just coincidental that they appear only during the Julio-Claudian era? Considering the relative scarcity of documents from the first half of the first century dealing with the patrimonium principis and the fact that as yet a third of them mention no indultarii, and considering that the term indultarius does not even appear among the far more numerous papyri which mention the indultarii (except for the occurrence of just Julio-Claudian times), I find not the indultarii seem to have been a group that disappeared with the Augustus, when the patrimonium began being treated as part of the patrimonium, and when the owners of estates had exactly the same obligations as the indultarii (except).

By itself, the term indultarius indicates a person who is either discharged or exempt from a service or an obligation (Livy, I, 10, 10). On the basis of other known indultarii, and other known indultarii (Livy, I, 10, 10), I find it is dealing with the indultarii (Livy, I, 10, 10) who had settled in the estates. This is due not only to the fact that a list of the indultarii in the estate of Claudius are under 3000, but only 1700 in 100, and to the fact that, judging by the statutes, they also belong to the indultarii (Livy, I, 10, 10) of the indultarii (Livy, I, 10, 10) of the population.

Moreover, the term indultarius indicates a person who is either discharged or exempt from a service or an obligation (Livy, I, 10, 10). Both Martin and Chalon overlooked a very serious objection raised by H. Krüper. In the phrase propter rationem (reason) stating, he observed, that the privilegium was not have two different syntactical functions, being possessive when it comes to rationem (reason), separative when it comes to propter (on account of). The individuals are at the same time propter (on account of) as they are rationem (reason) of the same colour.¹¹ As a grammatically parallel expression, Krüper suggested propter rationem rationem (on account of reason).¹² Boeckh recently offered propter rationem rationis (on account of reason's reason).

But can we accept Krüper's own solution to the problem, namely that the rationem were, like some temples and some priests, exempt from taxation? If we turn once more to the independence of the association of the adulescentes of the estate of C. Marius, we note that they belonged to a class subject to the poll tax, perhaps the most important class of the adulescentes being that the money for the education should be paid out of the common treasury of the association to the credit of its proventus and reventus. These proventus can not be regarded, therefore, as exempt from taxation — if not not wholly so. In dealing with the problem A. E. R. Boak summarized his own views as follows: 'The word propter (on account of) implies an exemption from possession or obligation, and elements suggest that if we reject the solution proposed by Roemerfeld and Clerel it refers to exemption from personal services such as canal and dyke work, transportation, charges, and the like.'

This is by far the most promising line of investigation and what must be further decided is whether it is an agreement between the lessee and his latus only, or between the tenant and the official administration. That is offered in such an order etc. An example of the former kind is offered as a lease of a villa situated on a no longer used estate owned by M. Apollonius Saturninus and L. Claudius Haterius, of Thiergoey. In the proventus of the estate leased for a fixed term the bath to two individuals, retaining for himself a prerogative stated in very interesting words: propter rationem rationis.¹³ However, this is the term of a collector, not for a proprietor (acquisition, determination, prerogative, reservation, division, etc.). Now the latus had no right to grant exemption from a public law, and it is almost certain that we are dealing with an immunity from a private law (private bath). It is quite possible, therefore, that the adulescentes of the imperial estates were persons exempt from services, levies, and payments to the owners and the supervisors that other tenants had to contribute. Such a clarification of certain rationes, however, would hardly make sense when encountered in public documents, and is totally out of place in the compendio of 981, where what seems to be presupposed are the proventus of the proventus and latus on the other.

We are fortunate in possessing a recently published program which deals with one of the adulescentes listed in the compendio. It is dated on exactly the previous year during which Honorius, son of Petronius, was indeed senatus senatus senatus. This adulescentis in the office complained to a high functionary (his name and title have been omitted) that Honorius served as a collector for four proventus, or proventus, but then severed his obligations and refused to undertake any more collections. propter rationem rationis, or proventus proventus. In other words, he acted as if he were an exempt farmer or a person whose name appeared on the album

26. Anodios, P. 1 and 214 (H. p. 100, 100a, 2100) (Mantiphis). Confiscated by the klados.

27. Alypius, P. Strassb. 180/P. 180a (p. 100a) (Hermannopolis). This is the only occurrence of the term klados in the Hermannopolis archive.

The following persons have been seen by various scholars as owners of oxonia, although their properties are never so termed, or as recipients of grants of land made by the emperor or the prefect, for which, with the possible exception of nos. 11, there is no evidence. See, e.g., Roscher, RE-HRE, pp. 293, 300 ff., nos. 18-19; Longuet, L'administration romaine, pp. 144, 146 ff.; Hoffmann, HP 3, 1949, pp. 140-141; Johnson, "Notes" and "Conclusions." In the last article Johnson argues for a differentiation between oxonia and oxia, (see also his "Terminology," p. 81, n. 1), which does not hold true. Indeed the term oxia is used of things in order to refer to part of an oxonia, but it can also mean the entire property, as in P. 1 and 2225 (III), p. 199 and P. 185, 185V, both of which are used in the same document to describe the same property. In an agricultural society, land and property are often interchangeable terms. Moreover, Johnson's theory that oxia, oxonia were to be used for similar expressions referred to "hired lands, estates" (see "Conclusions," p. 92) by the emperor or the prefect is unfounded. Johnson and Longuet use this concept of oxia as oxonia (see also Johnson's definition of oxia and oxonia only in the two papers mentioned above), based on the presumption of the klados grant (pages 1, 4, 22, 23, 29, 30, 36, 37, 80 and 105) and published by I. Julius Naxandros (nos. 16, 20, and 45; see the edition by Chalon, L'Épître). It is to be seen on what grounds a small group of "servicemen" has been segregated out of the hundreds of persons who refer to their property as oxonia or oxia, the standard way of expressing ownership (e.g., in property declarations).

Hoffmann (on whom see above, Chapter II), by identifying these oxonia as oxonia, Annulus, Elmslie, Brattin (P. RyI 140/167) with the oxonia of Hieronymianus, Iulianus, Hieronymianus (P. RyI 152/45). Johnson's objections as well as his proposed solution ("Notes," pp. 123 ff.) strike me as too elaborate and unnecessary. We are actually dealing with two different locations; a farmstead

Appendix Three

Note on the Procurator Usiacus

Unlike other high officials of Roman Egypt who have received, or are still receiving, close scrutiny and detailed examination, the procurator usiacus shares a common fate with his counterparts the chorobates in that he has not been the subject of a systematic and exhaustive study. In recent years a number of valuable attempts to clarify the administration of the oenotriac region were made, but emphasis was placed upon the officials of the local area. The official was not treated in full detail and hardly anything was said about the procurator usiacus.

For the rest, and the rest is because of the procurator usiacus as well as for his composition within the hierarchy of the highland region of Egypt, we must still depend on what Wiedemann wrote in 1917. This article was rather reliable, and more information is currently available to the scholar. As far as a working list of procurator usiaci is concerned, Rodhe's list is not only hopelessly out of date, but in Elman's list the inclusion of several names is doubtful, while among the oenotriac chorobates some names are given as well as some private (e.g., Had.)¹ Other presentations of procurator usiaci are given in Procurator usiaci Aegypti.²

There is also a tendency to regard the office of the procurator usiacus as actually all a title to be bestowed upon any procurator of the same more positively defined than is our better-known chorobates or epitropoi.³ Later, of course, when the procurator usiacus was a real job, it was somewhat difficult to do, and difficult to get out of. We have thus reached the point where there are, in the hierarchy of the subject, three persons competing for the office of the procurator usiacus in 100 A.D.: Cleodas, Progenes, and his father, the real Ptolemy Auletes. It is possible that not one of them actually ever held that office. Such a state of affairs has naturally befuddled the entire matter and has further resulted in the creation of another whimsical power and competence extended far beyond the limits of the oenotriac region by the posthumous.

There exists, then, a general demand for a detailed study of the oenotriac region, purely as a branch of the administration, and of the procurator usiacus as its head. This short note cannot, of course, claim to meet it. The entire matter is outside the scope, as the chronological limits placed upon this study, since the creation of the agrori by the Ptolemy of the end of the 1st century B.C. was by the emperor. I do not, however, wish to point out some flaws in the currently accepted theories, to present an explanation of the individuals who have valid claims to the title of the procurator usiacus, and to point out some troublesome areas that require further investigation.

Isaiah was the subordinate of the adon logoi only if it can be proven that (a) it was invariably the subordinate of the tyggyon (2) who was called upon to become don (3) and (4) the tyggyon (1) and (2) the adon logoi and the tyggyon (2) were combined in one object. The answer to this is given by the recently published SH 9905 (1970) wherein Modestus, known to have been adon logoi in 184 (P. 306, 928), is described as a tyggyon (1) and (2) the tyggyon The case of Claudio Linchuan needs further investigation. Claimed that he was procurator general in 1977-1980, he is what exactly how we have that this was also his post in 2012-13? His activities for that period are well documented. In P. 116-178 he is involved in matters of the army, specifically the impressment of inmates, in P. 116-18 he is involved in having made an edipos 1977, in P. 118-119, P. 118-120, P. 121-122 and 123-124, P. 125-126, P. 127-128, P. 129-130, P. 131-132, P. 133-134, P. 135-136, P. 137-138, P. 139-140, P. 141-142, P. 143-144, P. 145-146, P. 147-148, P. 149-150, P. 151-152, P. 153-154, P. 155-156, P. 157-158, P. 159-160, P. 161-162, P. 163-164, P. 165-166, P. 167-168, P. 169-170, P. 171-172, P. 173-174, P. 175-176, P. 177-178, P. 179-180, P. 181-182, P. 183-184, P. 185-186, P. 187-188, P. 189-190, P. 191-192, P. 193-194, P. 195-196, P. 197-198, P. 199-200, P. 201-202, P. 203-204, P. 205-206, P. 207-208, P. 209-210, P. 211-212, P. 213-214, P. 215-216, P. 217-218, P. 219-220, P. 221-222, P. 223-224, P. 225-226, P. 227-228, P. 229-230, P. 231-232, P. 233-234, P. 235-236, P. 237-238, P. 239-240, P. 241-242, P. 243-244, P. 245-246, P. 247-248, P. 249-250, P. 251-252, P. 253-254, P. 255-256, P. 257-258, P. 259-260, P. 261-262, P. 263-264, P. 265-266, P. 267-268, P. 269-270, P. 271-272, P. 273-274, P. 275-276, P. 277-278, P. 279-280, P. 281-282, P. 283-284, P. 285-286, P. 287-288, P. 289-290, P. 291-292, P. 293-294, P. 295-296, P. 297-298, P. 299-300, P. 301-302, P. 303-304, P. 305-306, P. 307-308, P. 309-310, P. 311-312, P. 313-314, P. 315-316, P. 317-318, P. 319-320, P. 321-322, P. 323-324, P. 325-326, P. 327-328, P. 329-330, P. 331-332, P. 333-334, P. 335-336, P. 337-338, P. 339-340, P. 341-342, P. 343-344, P. 345-346, P. 347-348, P. 349-350, P. 351-352, P. 353-354, P. 355-356, P. 357-358, P. 359-360, P. 361-362, P. 363-364, P. 365-366, P. 367-368, P. 369-370, P. 371-372, P. 373-374, P. 375-376, P. 377-378, P. 379-380, P. 381-382, P. 383-384, P. 385-386, P. 387-388, P. 389-390, P. 391-392, P. 393-394, P. 395-396, P. 397-398, P. 399-400, P. 401-402, P. 403-404, P. 405-406, P. 407-408, P. 409-410, P. 411-412, P. 413-414, P. 415-416, P. 417-418, P. 419-420, P. 421-422, P. 423-424, P. 425-426, P. 427-428, P. 429-430, P. 431-432, P. 433-434, P. 435-436, P. 437-438, P. 439-440, P. 441-442, P. 443-444, P. 445-446, P. 447-448, P. 449-450, P. 451-452, P. 453-454, P. 455-456, P. 457-458, P. 459-460, P. 461-462, P. 463-464, P. 465-466, P. 467-468, P. 469-470, P. 471-472, P. 473-474, P. 475-476, P. 477-478, P. 479-480, P. 481-482, P. 483-484, P. 485-486, P. 487-488, P. 489-490, P. 491-492, P. 493-494, P. 495-496, P. 497-498, P. 499-500, P. 501-502, P. 503-504, P. 505-506, P. 507-508, P. 509-510, P. 511-512, P. 513-514, P. 515-516, P. 517-518, P. 519-520, P. 521-522, P. 523-524, P. 525-526, P. 527-528, P. 529-530, P. 531-532, P. 533-534, P. 535-536, P. 537-538, P. 539-540, P. 541-542, P. 543-544, P. 545-546, P. 547-548, P. 549-550, P. 551-552, P. 553-554, P. 555-556, P. 557-558, P. 559-560, P. 561-562, P. 563-564, P. 565-566, P. 567-568, P. 569-570, P. 571-572, P. 573-574, P. 575-576, P. 577-578, P. 579-580, P. 581-582, P. 583-584, P. 585-586, P. 587-588, P. 589-590, P. 591-592, P. 593-594, P. 595-596, P. 597-598, P. 599-600, P. 601-602, P. 603-604, P. 605-606, P. 607-608, P. 609-610, P. 611-612, P. 613-614, P. 615-616, P. 617-618, P. 619-620, P. 621-622, P. 623-624, P. 625-626, P. 627-628, P. 629-630, P. 631-632, P. 633-634, P. 635-636, P. 637-638, P. 639-640, P. 641-642, P. 643-644, P. 645-646, P. 647-648, P. 649-650, P. 651-652, P. 653-654, P. 655-656, P. 657-658, P. 659-660, P. 661-662, P. 663-664, P. 665-666, P. 667-668, P. 669-670, P. 671-672, P. 673-674, P. 675-676, P. 677-678, P. 679-680, P. 681-682, P. 683-684, P. 685-686, P. 687-688, P. 689-690, P. 691-692, P. 693-694, P. 695-696, P. 697-698, P. 699-700, P. 701-702, P. 703-704, P. 705-706, P. 707-708, P. 709-710, P. 711-712, P. 713-714, P. 715-716, P. 717-718, P. 719-720, P. 721-722, P. 723-724, P. 725-726, P. 727-728, P. 729-730, P. 731-732, P. 733-734, P. 735-736, P. 737-738, P. 739-740, P. 741-742, P. 743-744, P. 745-746, P. 747-748, P. 749-750, P. 751-752, P. 753-754, P. 755-756, P. 757-758, P. 759-760, P. 761-762, P. 763-764, P. 765-766, P. 767-768, P. 769-770, P. 771-772, P. 773-774, P. 775-776, P. 777-778, P. 779-780, P. 781-782, P. 783-784, P. 785-786, P. 787-788, P. 789-790, P. 791-792, P. 793-794, P. 795-796, P. 797-798, P. 799-800, P. 801-802, P. 803-804, P. 805-806, P. 807-808, P. 809-810, P. 811-812, P. 813-814, P. 815-816, P. 817-818, P. 819-820, P. 821-822, P. 823-824, P. 825-826, P. 827-828, P. 829-830, P. 831-832, P. 833-834, P. 835-836, P. 837-

In tracing the career of Dionigijs Piliatus already stated that, if he had ever been prior of a monastery, he was certainly not 1973 BC to 913 and that his subsequent life, spent either in the desert or at Synchura, is precisely the one known to Socrates Scholasticus, a contemporary invariably coupled with Claudius Mamertus. The dates of 245 and 315 of [III, p. 410] P (see 78, 2123, 2262, P 4 of 16). There were, of course, many monasteries that could produce a variety of fields crystallized enough P (see 78) and perhaps enough for the establishment of a school, but never the performance Piliatus suggested that Socrates was a contemporary of Socrates, while in 2074 the inferior to the episcopate of Claudius Mamertus (Socrates, P 400, 45, also P 1-11 78 [no. 20] 1 was more other than Claudius Dionigijs.

Now another person appears on the scene. Petros Uralis (I clearly in the documents) whose office is recorded from 198 to 201, i.e. the period during which Diogenes was administering the district court, and perhaps even as well. His activities, however, are those of Diogenes when the latter was promoted to the office of the judicial notary; he orders a general declaration of new water land (Hilf 1922) and is engaged in a matrimonial (p. 11, Hilf 1922). There is obviously something fundamentally wrong when two persons appear having striking, indeed identical, claims to the title of the notary for the same period, when all the evidence indicates that there was only one such official at any given time.

Consider now that two declarations of unwatered land were made in 244/5 not in accordance with the orders of a procurator usque but of an Aurelius Antoninus who bears the title ἀρχιδικαστής ἀπὸ τοῦ αἰγυπτιακοῦ (P. Oxy. 974 and 3446). On the other hand a Claudius Alexandros, who bears the title borne by Diogenes and Cerialis, i.e. ἀρχιδικαστής (αὐτονομία) τοῦ αἰγυπτιακοῦ, and who is expressly stated to have had the same office as the latter, made an ἐπιστολή in 206/7 and subsequent ones in 208/9 and in 209/10 (P. Hamb. 12). We also know of an Aurelius Maximus, ἀρχιδικαστής ἀπὸ τοῦ αἰγυπτιακοῦ of ca. 223 (P. Soc. 1066, the name should be restored also in ibid. 24 verso [no. 19]). Finally, we ought to add a Tiberius (Claudius) Demetrius, domfot Νεμεδία) viri egregii procurator Augustorum (αὐτονομία) non iducentius episcopos chore inferioris (CIL V 7870 = Deissac, ILS 6762).

An examination of this material leads me to suggest the following. Beginning with the reign of Septimius Severus there appeared to official in Egypt one of whose primary functions was the annual examination of the lands, both public and private, especially with regard to titillation or absence thereof. To this effect he issued annual prescriptions for the registration of unimproved lands and conducted inspections, either in person or, more usually, in most cases through such lower officials as ἐκκρίτες (P. Giss. 48) and προφρονες (P. Soc. 2066). We should note that it is precisely at this time that the prefect stopped being the only official to issue orders for such annual declarations. There is no evidence whatsoever that this official was the procurator usque; on the contrary, all available documents argue against such an identification. The official is a viri egregii procurator Augustorum Augustorum as the case may be; his rank (that of decemviri) He is sometimes referred to as ἀρχιδικαστής or similar expressions, but whether this is a title or indeed his sole title is unknown. He serves in close association with the rationarii who, although a decemviri too was however vir perfectissimus (P. Lond. 1657 [III, p. 140] P. Oxy. 78: 2123; 2664. ibid. 16); but whether he was in fact his official adiutor or not is also unknown.

The following procurators Augustorum therefore were not procuratores usque:

1. Publius Cerialis, 198-201. P. Hamb. 12. BGU 2023.
2. Claudius Diogenes, 202-4. P. Flor. 175. ibid. Giss. 48. ibid. Hamb. 11. P. Albert. 80. P. Hal. 596; 682. P. Oxy. 1113. P. Brooklyn 3. Chronique 38, 1963, p. 117. P. Yakovlev 150. 106173.
3. Claudius Alexandros, 206-9. ibid. Hamb. 12.
4. Aurelius Maximus, 223. P. Soc. 1066, P. Ed. 24 verso [no. 19].
5. Aurelius Antoninus, 244/5. ibid. Oxy. 974, 3046.
6. Marcus Sulpianus, 245-8. ibid. Lond. 1175 [III, p. 140]. P. Oxy. 78: 2123, 2664. P. Leit. 16.
7. Ti. Claudius Demetrius, first half of III cent. ibid. V 7870 = Deissac, ILS 6762.

These seven individuals, then, and the perfectissimus Annus Diogenes already mentioned, should be removed from the roster of the procuratores usque at least for those years during which they were holding other offices.

I believe that there are more names that ought to be removed from the lists of usque.

The Ti. Claudius Blastus, προφρονες ἐπιστολὴ τοῦ αἰγυπτιακοῦ in CPR 1 (63-7), was almost certainly an idies logas, i.e. directed the confiscation and sale of the property of a debtor town.

Unnamed procurators (as well as the paterfamilias) are mentioned in the following documents: BGU 1047 (ca. 131) where the subscription of line 11 is the signature of Ἀνθ. 77
 (139) BGU 300 (115) where in line 8 either ἐπιτάσσουσιν or ἐπιτάσσει may be supplied for the procurator suggested by Wilcken (WCh. 36), P. Giss. 40 (213) where the ἀρχαίσι may have been Aurelio-Isidorus, P. Nagada 8 (220), P. Chai. 1614 (234), 1626 (238), 1623 (241).

I should like to close this note with a list of the known legal non-dynastic officials of the procuratorship:

1. Κρόσις, procurator (procurator) τῆς ἀρχαρχαίης (BGU 1047).

2. Ἡρακλῆς, ἀρχαρχαίονος ἐκδότης (P. Anth. 77).

3. Νέκος, ὄψις, ἀρχαρχαίης, ἀρχαίης τῆς ἀρχαρχαίης ἀρχαρχαίης (P. Chai. 5103).

Addenda

Since the submission of the manuscript to the publisher early in 1977, two short but important works have appeared, and it is indeed a pity that I have not been able to make use of them. R. Blackstone, 'Two Natives (Imperial Properties)', Athenaeum 84, 1976, pp. 14-36, and D. J. Crawford, 'Imperial Estates', in M. I. Huxley, ed., Studien zum Römischen Property (Cambridge, 1976), pp. 15-20, and 173-207. Dr Crawford's detailed bibliography is a masterpiece, and her collection of the pertinent evidence is exhaustive. Her analysis of the evidence is sensitive and penetrating, and her conclusions thoughtful and convincing. Some of the principal sources which she has already been marshalled by H. A. Rowan in JRS 46, 1976, pp. 164-8, and 110.

[illegible]

Lastly, three of the papers mentioned in the Abstracts (pp. viii) have since been published by myself: P. Sorbent in my '1604' (W. 11v. 104) and O. Yale in ELSP 12 (1975, pp. 85-9), and P. Sorbent in my '1701' (W. 114) in ELN 15, 1976, pp. 147-51.

Page 15, in P. Soc. 1950) see the introduction and notes in G. Messeri in M. Manfredi, ed. Correzioni e notazioni di papiri della Società Italiana Florence 1977, pp. 40-9) dated 19 Nov. 27 B.C., where the phrase '... τοιαντοῦτο ...' is translated by H. Thiersch as '... τοιαντοῦτο ... τοιαντοῦτο ...' (Autosyntagmatische ὅμοιοι ἑκείνου). See also the discussion and acceptable supplement proposed by the author, which would not only affirm the presence of a disjunctive construction (p. 53), but also present it with the earliest evidence of an estate owned by Augustus in Egypt.

Page 10, with note 20. Cf. Diarmachidreos (see also G. Banti, Strategia dell'Armistice in epoca romana (Papologiae Barchinensis 11) Bruxelles, 1972, pp. 8, 11-12).

Page 40. Dr. Crawford has drawn my attention to Strabo 17. 828, where an island in the Thetis is particularly productive of the best dates characterized as αὐτὸν τῶν ἡμετέρων (not ἡμετέρας). I suppose, by μεταρ, but it is more natural to understand the word as referring to the prefects of Egypt.

Page 48, note 81 and page 57, with note 84. Cf. P. Mich. fasc. no. 5, Lewis, JASPE 11, 1974, pp. 52-4, and Papyrus in the Roman Empire (Oxford, 1974), pp. 106-8 and 114.

Page 57, with note 85. On the analogy of P. Oxy. 2837 9-10, I would now read P. Mich. 560, 8-9 as τῶν ἡμετέρων ἀρχόντων (cf. 11).

Page 74. On P. Arif. 30 verso see my short correction in Hellenica 28, 1976, p. 51.

Pages 85-8, with note 10. The earliest references to a magister ιστορίας are P. Oxy. 3247 and P. Beatty P. 60p. 1-2 A 13, 298.

Page 87, with note 16. It is very gratifying to note that P. J. Parsons (ibid. 1974, pp. 116-7) has independently reached the same conclusion as I have reached. In my note I should now the important P. Oxy. 3263 10, μαγιστῶν ἱστορίας καὶ ἀπολογισμῶν (cf. 11), and see J. Rea's comments ad loc.
